When providing opening sizes, it is best to start inside your room or patio and give us the actual daylight opening size moving from left to right always looking from inside towards the outside. This helps eliminate issues once your placed.

Note: All dimensions are broken down to a minimum of 1/8 inch increments.

Example: If the width is 48 13/16 inches, the size of the opening should be given as 48 7/8 inches.

Getting Started:

1. You will need A tape measure and pencil .
2. Stand Inside your porch and sketch a simple layout of your porch.
3. Start Numbering your openings from the left most opening and make that opening #1 on your sketch. Continue numbering the openings clockwise.
4. Make certain you include a door as a numbered opening.

If you do not yet have a porch, no worries, just follow these steps as if you were standing inside your future porch.

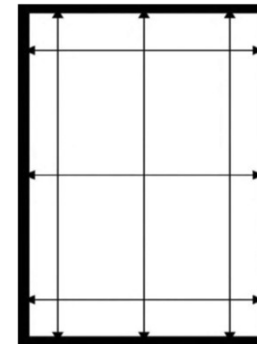

Measuring your Window Openings:

1. Measure 3 locations across the width to determine the smallest dimension. Use the smallest dimension Horizontally when providing the width to us.
2. The process is the same for the height except, Use the smallest dimension Vertically when providing the height to us .

Always use the smallest dimensions in width and height as these are the dimensions used to manufacture the window or panels to go into that opening. These 2 dimensions (W x H) are now your daylight opening size.

We have included A Drawing on the next page to reference Sketch. The rest of the page is blank. Feel Free to use it to sketch your porch and include it with your Quote request.
